Eulogy – Best Marine Film 2009

When we see marine films, we often think of Jacques Cousteau and Hans Hass. It is therefore a great challenge to step into the shoes of these two marine biologists.

The ocean has been investigated less than the surface of the moon. It is secretive and filming conditions under water are difficult and often dangerous.

With an adventurous spirit, enthusiasm and wide knowledge in this area, the film producer has succeeded in portraying his marine subjects as intelligent creatures and showing us a world which would not normally be available to our eyes.

The film, which is to receive an award, does not merely fulfil scientific criteria, it is also entertaining and excellently shot. A special film made by a special person.

The Green Screen Prize 2009 for the best marine film goes to “The Octopus of Stromboli” by Sigrid Tesche.
