INTERNATIONALES NATURFILMFESTIVAL ECKERNFÖRDE

Eulogy – Best Environmental Film 2009

Ecology really means the changing relationship between organisms and also with their environment. Here the winner should be a documentary which makes clear how much living things profit from one another in an area, but also how dependent they are on one another. Thus, when one side breaks down, that the whole system suffers.

In this work plants, animals and human beings have lived together virtually for centuries, in a world which has not only remained unchanged, but is also beautiful, diverse, useful and fragile.

Once again man is threatening this system, by his changing habits, of which he is quite unaware,. perhaps in quite a different place in the world. This film enlightens us , teaching us to be aware of how we consume in our world today.

It is an excellent documentary film, using the most sophisticated and elegant means to create aesthetic enjoyment.

The Green Screen Prize 2009 for the best environmental film goes to “Cork – Forest in a bottle”, a BBC film y Mike Salisbury and Paul Morisson.
